Competition For Utilities

"Try it. You'll like it," said U.S. Sen. Philip A. Hart (D-Mich.) with reference to competition among public utilities. He remarked that such competition could go a long way toward getting more efficient and cheaper service for consumers of natural gas, electric power and telephone service.

Senator Hart contends that developing technology has made many functions, which now are regulated as monopolies, "ripe for competition." He specifically referred to telephone service, electric power and natural gas in proposing utility competition to the National Association of Regulatory Utility Commissioners.

While his proposal for competition between utilities instead of continuing monopolies could not be expected to gain widespread support among the utilities, it could be anticipated to win consumer backing, particularly if it held any promise of lower instead of higher utility rates. - Shreveport (La.) Journal

Happiness Is...

A 38-year old widow won't have to pay inheritance taxes on $177,000 in gifts she received from an elderly gentleman friend, the Pennsylvania Supreme Court has ruled, because he was not thinking of passing on when he was giving her presents.

At the age of 87, he had something else entirely on his mind, the court concluded.

Now the widow and the old boy's ghost are both smiling. - Asheville (N.C.) Citizen-Times

Forget Your Change, George?

Funny, how things change. Four years ago, George Wallace complained that there was not a dime's worth of difference in the two major political parties.

Then along came 1972. Now Gov. Wallace says the Democrats must move back to the right if they want to survive.

What he means is that he liked them better when there wasn't a dime's worth of difference. - Miami (Fla.) Herald

Heiskell buried today

LITTLE ROCK (AP) — Expressions of sympathy from across the nation came Friday to the family of John Netherland Heiskell, editor of the Arkansas Gazette since 1902 who died Thursday at the age of 100.

Funeral for Heiskell was to be at 1:30 p.m. today in Little Rock with burial in Mount Holy Cemetery.

Rep. Wilbur D. Mills, D-Ark., sent a telegram expressing his "deep regrets."

James Farley, former postmaster general, said Heiskell was "a truly great American and patriot and one of the great newspaper publishers of his day and generation and will long be remembered by not only the citizens of your state but by newspaper people around the country with whom he was so well known."

KNIFE-MAKER—Jimmy Lile, above, is shown in his workshop finishing one of his special "Bowie" knives. In all, Lile makes more than two dozen different size and style knives for the hunter and outdoorsman. (See article below).

Need a good knife?

Arkansas is a state rich in many areas—history, folklore, natural resources, modern progress, etc.—but perhaps Arkansas is richest in another area, that of human resources. And one outstanding example in the state of this type of wealth is Jimmy Lile of Russellville, a giant of a person known as the Arkansas Knifemaker and whose title should rightly be extended to that of the American Knifemaker.

Lile's skill as a knifemaker is known throughout the United States and is matched only by his reputation as the "Poor Man's Will Rogers", a nickname he received because of his overwhelming friendships with people from all walks of life. A personable, versatile, talented man, Lile takes great pride in his country and his work, and produces the finest handmade knives to be found anywhere. He is currently at work on a commemorative knife for America's Bicentennial in 1976 and, when completed, it will be the second such Lile commemorative knife presented to President Nixon during his terms of office.

From his home on the outskirts of Russellville, Lile makes hundreds of knives a year to fulfill the orders he receives from all sections of the nation. In one morning alone, he recently received telephone calls from twenty-seven different people in eleven different states, all before 11 A.M.

When he's not busy making knives, Lile is often found speaking to various civic groups and sportsmen's clubs, and on the weekends he's usually traveling to gun shows and arts and crafts fairs held everywhere from Canada to Mexico. He's a professional in the fullest sense of the word and doesn't hesitate to tell you his knives have the best edge there is obtainable.

Lile, 39, began making knives as a youngster in Russellville at the age of 8. He first whittled ones out of wood and, later, at the age of 12, forged a hunting knife. His father was a coal miner and working part time around the mines, Lile had an opportunity to watch the blacksmiths there who sharpened and repaired tools and shod mules.

During high school, Lile made a lot of knives for his family and friends and in college, used his talent to help pay expenses. A jack-of-all-trades, he worked many years in the construction business as a superintendent and construction engineer and even taught school and coached basketball for four years. He began seriously making knives ten years ago and three years ago decided to make it a full-time occupation.

Most people ordering a Lile knife do so from a 25-page booklet Lile has especially prepared containing pictures and explanations of his various knives. Travelers through the Russellville area can find a showcase of the knives in Price and Dixon Sporting Goods Store located at 2902 West Main Street. Prices range from $35 to $150, but each knife is completely handmade from the finest materials available and is guaranteed for life and becomes a family heirloom when handed down from father to son.

Lile makes all types of knives, including fishing, hunting, skinning, kitchen and camping knives, daggers and boot knives, hatchets, Bowie's and toothpicks. He does many special design knives and will shape and size the blade and handle to the customer's preference. He continually works on improving his knives and comes up with new twists for them such as his Packhawk, a small tomahawk with a sharp head for breaking down large animals and a smaller sharp hook for skinning.

After 8 years:

Dear Abby returns

Dear Abby...

gets 500,000 letters a year, asking for advice. Answers every one of them! But saves the most interesting for her column—which appears in this newspaper and 800 others regularly. Read it, and you'll understand why!

Abigail Van Buren ("Dear Abby"), who returns to The Star Jan. 1, is a housewife and mother who writes the most widely read human relations newspaper column in the world. Tiny and attractive, direct and forthright in manner, wise and witty in her comments, Abby has become a household word in this country and elsewhere.

Abby launched her writing career in 1956 when, on a typical impulse, she challenged a San Francisco editor to let her improve his newspaper. Her formula of common sense and wit, her judgment in the selection of letters to publish and her untiring efforts made her a celebrity almost overnight.

After her marriage and the birth of two children (a son and a daughter), Abby's unusual energy propelled her into civic work for the American Red Cross, the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis, Easter Seals and the promotion of mental health.

When her husband's business took her to California, she probed successfully the opportunities in journalism which she had studied in college. Having found an outlet for her deep interest in relieving the tensions and emotional agonies of people, she began a luminous career that today ranks her high among the country's best-known and most admired women.

In addition to her daily newspaper column, Abby has a radio network program and has written three books and numerous national magazine articles.

Residing now in St. Paul with her successful husband, Morton Phillips, she travels throughout the country on speaking engagements for which she is in great demand.

Dear Abby's daily mail all but swamps a secretarial staff. No letter is ignored. All that bear a return address are answered, if not by Abby herself, always under her supervision. The 1,300 letters that are published annually in Abby's column are selected by Abby herself from the millions she receives. All of the answers are uniquely hers.

The strong do-it-yourself character of Dear Abby's career in print is emphasized by the origin of her nom de plume, her own invention. She selected Abigail from the Old Testament ("Blessed art thou and blessed is thy advice, O Abigail.") The surname she borrowed from Martin Van Buren, the eighth President of the United States, because she liked the "aristocratic old family ring."

Abby was born July 4, 1918, in Sioux City, Iowa, an identical twin. She attended public schools and later, Morningside College, which recently awarded her an honorary degree.

Jumbo jet crashes in Everglades, search for survivors starts

MIAMI (AP) — An Eastern Air Lines TriStar jetliner, first of the new breed of jumbo jets to carry passengers to their deaths, has crashed into the swampy Everglades. It was feared that at least half of the 187 persons aboard were killed.

Rescue workers continued to pull survivors from the wreckage, water and mud in the early morning darkness, and the search for the living and the dead continued past dawn today.

Eastern said at least 88 persons survived.

The big, wide-bodied Lockheed L1011 went down in desolate, virtually inaccessible swampland, seriously hampering rescue efforts.

Helicopters and volunteer drivers of airboats—shallow-draft boats that can skim over the swamp—were pressed into service.

"We think we got all of them (survivors) out," one of the rescuers said as the count reached 88, "but we'll go back when it's light to look for more."

One passenger said a stewardess led the survivors in singing Christmas carols until the first rescue helicopter arrived, about 30 minutes after the crash.

"It's the worst thing I've ever seen in my life," said Bill Hodges of Miami, a Coast Guard helicopter pilot. "Bodies were all over the place. There were more dead than alive."

"Just two pieces of the plane were intact, the tail and a section of the cabin," Hodges said. "The rest of the plane was in a thousand pieces."

The L1011, Eastern's Flight 401 en route to Miami from New York's Kennedy International Airport, went down about 17 miles northwest of Miami International.

Martin Siminerio, 22, of Long Island, one of the survivors, said there was no word from the pilot, no explosion and almost no warning before the plane hit.

"The plane was flying fine," Siminerio said. "We just went down slightly and then came back up. I thought nothing of it. The next thing I knew we hit." The plane slammed into a marsh about 300 yards off the Tamiami Trail, a state highway that cuts across the Everglades from Miami to Florida's west coast.

Despite its nearness to the road, the wreckage was accessible only by helicopter, swamp buggies and shallow-draft airboats driven by airplane propellers.

In Washington, a Federal Aviation Administration spokesman said the crash was the first fatal accident involving a Boeing 747, Douglas DC10 or an L1011, the new generation of jumbo jets.

Eastern has 10 of the L1011s, which cost $15 million each. The maiden flight of the three-engine craft was on Nov. 16, 1970, and Eastern put the planes into commercial service only last summer.

Flight 401 disappeared from the Miami airport's air-traffic-control radar at 11:42 p.m. EST, the FAA's Don Byers said. Visibility was 10 miles, and there were only scattered light clouds at 2,000 feet.

A 10-member investigating team was dispatched to the scene within hours of the crash by the National Transportation Safety Board in Washington.

The pilot was Capt. Robert A. Loft, who had been flying for Eastern since Sept. 20, 1960. Of the airline's some 4,000 flight officers, he had seniority No. 50.

All of the 13 crew members were from Miami.

"The pilot didn't say anything before the plane crashed, as far as we know," said Bill Wooten, Eastern's chief spokesman in Miami.

J. C. Walker, 60, of New York City said he crawled away from the plane through the swamp. "I never crawled so much before," he said.

Walker, a passenger, said he was fastening his seat belt for landing when "I saw a flash of light. I don't remember an explosion. I just remember the bright flash of light."

Survivors were taken to Palmetto, Mercy and Baptist hospitals in Miami. Many were badly hurt, and Catholic priests administered last rites to several.

"They were all wet and muddy and smelled strongly of kerosene," said an attendant at Mercy Hospital. He said some appeared to have suffered burns.

Among the first group of survivors brought to Mercy was a white French poodle.

"He was awful scared," said the attendant. "He was scroungy and had oil all over him."

Nixon orders bombing halt

SAIGON (AP) — President Nixon has ordered another open-ended bombing halt in efforts to induce Hanoi into further peace negotiations, American officials said today. They did not disclose when the halt would take effect.

The strongest speculation in Saigon was that the U.S. Command already had halted the bombing above the 20th parallel, which would include the Hanoi-Haiphong area, or sharply reduced it sometime today in what could be more than just the traditional brief New Year's cessation.

The U.S. Command said it had no comment on the speculation. But a U.S. communique showed that tactical fighter-bomber strikes reported in South Vietnam during the 24 hours ending at 8 a.m. today nearly doubled to a total of 169. This was interpreted by some observers as a sign that less strikes were flown over North Vietnam.

The South Vietnamese foreign ministry has announced a 24-hour New Year's cease-fire beginning at 6 p.m. Saigon time Sunday. The Viet Cong also have declared a 24-hour cease-fire, scheduled to start five hours before Saigon's.

The U.S. Command would say only that air operations continued against North Vietnam during the 24-hour period ending at 8 a.m. Saigon time today—7 p.m. EST Friday.

Radio Hanoi, however, reported there were American air strikes around the North Vietnamese capital at least until midnight Friday. The broadcast claimed another B52 bomber was shot down just before midnight and said an Air Force Phantom was downed over Vinh Phu.

FOOTPRINTS

By GEORGE SMITH

I turned on the television set the other night and there HE was. Garner Ted Armstrong. With long sideburns, a modified Porter Wagoner hairdo. Slim. Gook-looking. Sincere.

If my mental recall is accurate, seeing Garner Ted Armstrong on television the other night is the only time I have ever seen him. But he has been one of my favorite radio evangelists for years.

I used to work the swing shift at the Campbell Soup plant in Paris, Tex. in between going to college and chasing girls, and the only worthwhile program I could pick up on "rayjo" (as we say in East Texas) on the way home—a long, lonely drive of about 26 miles—was Garner Ted Armstrong. Oh, I had a choice of a station out of Mexicali that featured guitar solos or James Anderson Riley, a preacher of the bully-boy vein who ordered you to send 50 cents for his free booklet on "10 Easy Ways to Outfox the Devil" or "Salvation: The Icing on the Cake." But I always stuck to Garner Ted, who was aired out of Broken Bow, Okla., a 50-watt station which interrupted its country-western programs long enough to allow a little evangelizing from 1 to 1:30 a.m.

In fact, I became a Garner Ted fan, relishing in his straightforward approach to Christianity, and his non-nonsense ideas on morals, mores and religious taboos.

No one, not even Billy Graham, who relies heavily on visual contact, nor Oral Roberts, who has turned respectable since his hey-days in the mammoth "saving test shows." Could match the sincerity over the airways that GTA emitted.

I had always pictured Garner Ted as a roly-poly, slick-haired, bug-eyed evangelist, the type that leans toward radio contact rather than making public appearances. But the realization that he comes on strong visually only bolstered his image in my estimation.

He will be in Shreveport in the near future and I would like to go down and see him. But since I neglected to travel the 100-odd miles down there to see Sonny and Cher back in October, I doubt that I will make a major effort to see an evangelist. Even if it would seem like an "old home week."

Thinking about radio evangelists reminds me of another radio preacher. The occupation of the one I have in mind and GTA may be the same, but the resemblance ends there.

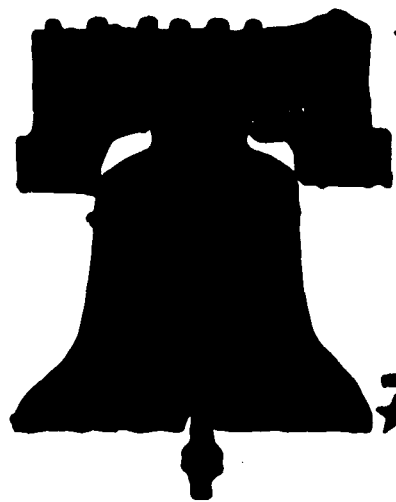

This particular preacher was of the old "and-Ah" school, and punctuated each sentence with at least four "and-Ahs."

I was in the company of Tom Dearmore, one of the best journalists to come out of Arkansas and who is currently an editorial writer for the Washington (D.C.) Star.

We were traveling a back road in the Ozarks and had the radio tuned to a local station.

"An-Ah, I'm tellin' you, an-Ah, you're going to Hell, an-Ah, if you, an-Ah, dance with those dancers, an-Ah, gamble with those gamblers, an-Ah, drink with those drinkers, an-Ah, with those sexers."

Garner Ted would have been proud of us for not having a wreck.

New Year's Prayer For Our City

○ LORD, WE PRAY THEE for this, the city of our love and pride. Help us make our community the mighty common workshop of our people, where everyone will find his place and task, in daily achievement building up his own life to resolute manhood, keen to do his best with hand and mind. Bind our citizens in the glow of neighborly goodwill, by the thrill of common joys, and the pride of common possessions. Grant us vision of our city, fair as she may be; a city of justice where none shall prey on others; a city of plenty and one of brotherhood, where all success shall be founded on service, and honor shall be given to nobleness alone; a city of peace, where order shall not rest on force, but on the love of all the city.

ARIES (Mar 21-Apr 19)
Don't be critical of your ideas today. They're really good if you give them a chance to work.

TAURUS (Apr 20-May 20)
If involved in a joint endeavor, offer your time and talents rather than cash. Keep expenses minimal.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
Someone wants to forgive and forget. Respond. They could become impatient and brush you off.

CANCER (June 21-July 22)
You have a good reason to feel optimistic about your work or career. Self-doubt is unnecessary at this time.

LEO (July 23-Aug 22)
It's not too important that everyone in your group agrees with you. The support you have is adequate.

VIRGO (Aug 23-Sept 22)
If you serve self-interest before the family's, results will disappoint you. Concern for others is more rewarding.

LIBRA (Sept 23-Oct 23)
Others may be unduly pessimistic regarding your plans. Listen, but don't let it dilute your optimism.

SCORPIO (Oct 24-Nov 22)
Pledges of material assistance should be discounted. Conditions could prevent them from being followed through.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov 23-Dec 21)
Negatives thinkers could slow you up today. Get it all together and do it yourself.

CAPRICORN (Dec 22-Jan 19)
Your hunches today could be a greater asset than your logic. Listen to that still, small voice.

AQUARIUS (Jan 20-Feb 18)
Someone you care for could unintentionally hurt your feelings. Be forgiving. They didn't really mean it.

PISCES (Feb 19-Mar 20)
Demands from another may seem unwarranted. In the long run, they'll help you make a beneficial change.

Carrying Guilt too Far
RAP:

I've got a guilty conscience that won't quit. I tell for this married man at work and for six months it was a pretty hot love affair. I told the guy I'm going with about it and he forgave me—he was in the army at the time. It's all over except I still suspect I was played for a fool. And I worry about doing wrong and getting off so easy.

Should I go to this man's wife and tell her about the affair? They say confession takes the guilt away. —ASHAMED
ASHAMED:

This kind of "confession" would take the WIFE away! And it's spelled "vengeance," not conscience. —HELEN ASHAMED:

Let the married man manage his own guilt. You took care of yours when you leaved with your boyfriend. —S.
HELEN AND SUE:

I went steady with this guy three years ago. He is a friend now. Recently he married another good friend of mine. She's very understanding.

About a week ago he came out and brought a guy who is interested in me. Last night he called and wanted to bring this friend over again. He's just trying to set it up for us.

But my folks are all unglued. They demand that I tell this fellow to bring his wife when he comes, as people will talk, otherwise. Sure, I'd like her to visit, but I'll feel silly insisting on it. (Sometimes she works evenings).

Why can't a male friend visit a female friend without his wife, especially if he brings along another guy who's interested? —ONLY FRIENDS
O.F.:

Your parents are too skitzy for these times, but don't down them for being concerned. They're still into the days when a husband and wife "owned" each other, and weren't too trustful about it.

What's wrong with stopping in to see a friend—especially if his understanding wife knows where he is? —SUE
DEAR O.F.:

Especially if the boyfriend is setting it up for another friend? Just be sure he isn't remembering old times and trying to renew them. —HELEN DEAR RAP:

This is in reply to "Unhappy But Not Ashamed"—the unmarried pregnant girl who wasn't allowed to finish high school with her class.

I am a former teacher who became pregnant during the middle of the year. School authorities told me I had to quit after four months, but recently there was a Federal law passed stating that teachers and STUDENTS cannot be forced to leave as long as they have their doctor's approval. If an expectant mother wants to continue in regular classes, she should contact the Legal Aid Society or a lawyer. —MRS. A. MRS. BOTTEL AND SUE:

"Not Ashamed." That sums it up! These unmarried pregnant girls don't know morality, self-discipline and responsibility, yet they expect all the privileges of the good girls. Who wants to watch a pregnant teenager waddling around school? If she has no self-respect, she might at least consider the sensibilities of others.

It's these promiscuous teens who are spreading VD everywhere, dumping unwanted children on society—and you two take their side! A prominent European has said Americans have gone from the Puritan ethic to total indecency in two generations.

What we need is a revival of shocked morality to turn back the tide—not open-armed acceptance, as you offer when you suggest they be allowed to attend school! —IRRITATED

LONG TIME SOCIAL WORKER
DEAR IRRITATED:

Would a scarlet letter suit you better? —HELEN AND SUE (GOT A PROBLEM? Or a subject for discussion, two-generation style? Direct your questions to either Sue or Helen Bottel—or both, in care of this newspaper, if you want a combination mother-daughter answer.)

TWO-TIMING DETECTED
LONDON (AP) — Housewife Sylvia Simmet reckons suspicious wives ought to know the truth about two-timing husbands. She has invented a "truth detector," a plastic pendulum which swings towards the area where the husband is. "If he says he's working late and the pendulum swings towards the other side of town, you know he's two-timing," claims Sylvia, 51, who plans to market the device at $6.70.

CHIMP PULLS SWITCH
LONDON (AP) — Minutes before a circus show was due to be staged at a concert hall, all the lights in the auditorium went out. Frantic electricians located the fault. A chimpanzee had thrown the master switch.

CONVERTIBLE SCHOOLS
VIENNA (AP) — To cope with the problem of changing school enrollments, Vienna is building three schools that can be converted into apartments. The three schools, planned for a housing development, will have 80 classrooms. Should demand for classrooms decline, the rooms can be converted easily into household units.

WORLD ALMANAC FACTS

Cities are a universal symbol of civilization which have served as places where people gathered for mutual safety and defense. Cities have gone on to become marketplaces for goods and ideas, seats of government, and centers of religious devotion. The World Almanac notes. By division of labor and by easing communication between people, cities created the opportunity to invent new technologies and new ways of viewing life.

By Oswald & James Jacoby
West's two-diamond bid was one of those Michaels cue bids designed to show both major suits but not necessarily a really good hand. North's double showed general strength and the bidding went on to six diamonds without much ado except that South did think about bidding seven.

South looked over dummy and was glad that he had only bid six. West's bidding had marked East with long clubs and it looked as if there would be no place to park his third heart. There were simple squeeze possibilities which would not work if East held three spades, including one higher than dummy's eight-spot.

Anyway, South was in six, so he led a trump to dummy's king. West showed out and now six was in jeopardy. South really huddled for awhile and finally came up with a way to endplay East.

He ruffed a spade, entered dummy with the king of hearts and ruffed dummy's last spade.

Now he cashed his ace of hearts. East showed out and, assuming East's last spade had been played, the endplay was set up.

South played a third round of trumps and East was on lead with nothing in his hand but clubs.

Unfortunately for expert South, he had been so excited about the endplay that he had forgotten to play out his king of clubs before throwing East in and East just led a low club and South had no way to score three club tricks.

What do you do now?

A—Bid seven clubs. Your partner has used the grand slam force to ask you to bid seven with two of the three top honors in trumps.

TODAY'S QUESTION
Instead of bidding three clubs, your partner has raised you to three hearts. What do you do now?

SHORT RIDS

WHAT ARE WE GOING TO DO ABOUT THE KING?

HE CAN'T GET A THING DONE.

By FRANK O'NEAL

SINCE THE QUEEN LEFT HIM, HE'S A CHANGED MAN.

HE JUST SITS ON HIS THRONE AND GINGS ALL DAY.

THE ROCKS IN YOUR HEAD, like these, are magnified 5,000 times by a scanning electron microscope for this photo made at Ohio State University. They are part of the balance organs in the inner ear. Researchers are studying the results when the rocks are exposed to gravity conditions different from earth's, a condition that may face future space explorers.

Q—Can hairs actually stand on end in times of stress?
A—Yes. Each hair is attached to a muscle.

Q—What are myrrh and frankincense, the gifts the three magi gave to the infant Jesus?

Frenchy Fuqua: clothes-minded running back

By IRA BERKOW
NEA Sports Editor

PITTSBURGH—(NEA)—Frenchy Fuqua's terrible wrath was visited upon Esquire Magazine in its November issue in a published letter entitled "Sour Drapes".

"I used to think Esquire was cool, but your selections of The Ten Best-Dressed Jocks (August issue) make me think your fashion editor wears white socks and a key chain. Bob Gibson in that blue single-breasted looked just right for attending a funeral."

Frenchy was critical of the selections of Rod Gilbert and John Mackey and called Carl Eller's closet highlight a "Goodwill dashiki."

The letter concluded: "I do not know which is more embarrassing—to have been omitted, as I was, from your picks or to have been included among that motley crew. (Signed) Count Frenchy Fuqua, Running Back, Pittsburgh Steelers."

Frenchy's lack of haute couture recognition may have motivated him to his greatest season on the field and in the closet.

Teaming with Franco Harris and Terry Bradshaw in the Steeler backfield, Frenchy helped the Steelers win their first division championship in history. Frenchy also admits to leading Pittsburgh in any fashion parade. And for the third straight season, he is the Steeler "dress-off" champion.

One recent early morning Frenchy sat in his apartment sipping coffee and spilling his heart out.

"I regret that I sent my Count outfit back to Detroit, where I live in the off-season," he said, "it would have freaked you out. Skintight lavender jump suit with white Buccaneer boots and pink floor-length cape and a monolithic glass cane. And, not finished yet, my white Musketeer hat, turned up on the left side with pink, white and purple ostrich plumes. Wow! Oh, wow!"

"Can you imagine that whacky magazine not including me, with an outfit like that? Next spring, know what I'm going to do? I will offer a formal challenge to all the so-called best-dressed in every city and send in the results to the magazine. Or have them cover the events!"

Frenchy's fiancée came in from the other room and he introduced her as "The Countess." She smiled. He went on. "The last time I was covered in a dress contest was for the Steelers. It's an annual thing and it's held about a month before the end of the season in the locker room after a practice."

"Everybody is fat-mouthin' about their rags until the moment of truth, when they meet The Count. Then they fall by the wayside. This year, Jim Clark was the white hope."

"You have all your clothes in your locker, hid. You put 'em on one at a time. We have an announcer who handles it like a prize fight. You start with the briefs. Clark broke out with powder-blue silk ones. I countered with my red bikinis."

"He pulled on some weird Zebra stockings. Then I blew his mind. I laid my red panty hose on him."

"He broke back with some blue velvet pants. I broke out in my pants with the new look of plaids. He tried to come on strong with some shirt that wasn't fantastic. He was fading, and I hadn't even got to the bulk of my dry goods. He knew it because already I was getting the 'oohs and aahs' from the players. He broke out in a plaid bow tie. Nothing. A sweater vest. Zero. Blue clogs. Embarrassing."

"I hit him with the rest of my three-piece red suit with blood-red turtle-neck. Then I had a sensational gimmick. From my vest pocket I pulled out a watch. I looked at it, looked at him and replied, 'Your time is runnin' out, Clark.'"

"Believe it or not, he began to sweat. He wiped his head with a towel. He said it was the lights."

Then Frenchy came on with his "knockout stuff": three-inch high heel white boots, a white wool wrap-around monogrammed coat and "broke down my white, gangster-style hat on one side like only I can and that was it."

"Clark knew he had been on the wrong track," said Frenchy. "He conceded. Right, Countess?" She smiled.

Frenchy continued on about his new caveman suit (with fur poncho) that he was soon to sport. ("Even my tailor gets carried away sometimes.") And how some of the players serve as his valets in the off-season (when he adds a few pounds and cannot bend in his skintight suits) and after games when they open doors for him and one may play a victory flute behind him.

"It's very exciting after games," he said. "I just feel good—when we win—from the top of my gorgeous head to the bottom of my curly toes. I hear the fans chanting when I come out of the locker room. 'Frenchy's comin', Frenchy's comin', what's he got on?' I sign autographs from different poses, so everyone can get a good look at me."

"Then I jump into my Mark IV. The Countess is waiting for me. I blast on a tape, usually a jumpin' tune like 'The Cisco Kid,' and we speed off. And, you know, this may sound silly, but like 50 yards away I can still hear the fans. 'Ooh, did you see that—was he bad.'"

I turned to Frenchy's fiancée (real name, Doris Moore) and asked her how she liked being "The Countess."

"It gives me a headache," she said.

North Carolina wins Peach Bowl

By KAROL STONGER

Associated Press Sports Writer
Ten tasty weekend treats have been whipped up in bowls from Florida to California for gridiron gourmets.

Post-season college football fanatics whetted their appetites Friday night when North Carolina State frosted No. 18 West Virginia in the Peach Bowl and Tampa edged Kent State 21-18 in the Tangerine Bowl.

But the piece de resistance of the holiday feast is the Rose Bowl, one of three New Year's Day classics involving six of the top 12 teams in The Associated Press pre-bowl poll.

Sophomore Stan Fritts set a Peach Bowl record with his three touchdowns, one from one yard out and two from the four. Quarterback Dave Buckley passed for two TDs, one to his twin brother, Don, and went over from the two-yard line for another. The 37-yard bomb to his brother in the first quarter wiped out a 7-6 West Virginia lead. The Mountaineers' only other scores were two field goals, also in the first period.

Kent State, the Mid-American conference champion, mounted a furious fourth-quarter attack after trailing 21-0 at the half but lost the Bowl battle when Herb Page missed two extra-point attempts and quarterback Greg Kokal failed on a two-point run attempt.

Tampa quarterback Buddy Carter teamed with tight end Paul Orndorf for TD passes of 15 and 35 yards in the first quarter before Carter was relieved by Fred Solomon who capped an 89-yard drive with a two-yard run in the second quarter to end Tampa's scoring.

The national championship is at stake in Pasadena, Calif., when top-ranked Southern Cal puts its unbeaten record on the line against 9-1-0 Ohio State.

"This Southern Cal team is the best team Ohio State has ever played," said Coach Woody Hayes, aiming for victory No. 150 and his fourth Rose Bowl triumph in five appearances. "They can run and pass, they have a good defense."

Little red wagons, any one?

WASHINGTON (NEA)

When my two oldest sons came to me with their paper-route money crumpled in their fists and begged to be allowed to buy "sting-ray" bicycles with high-rise handlebars and "banana" seats, I gladly gave the maternal blessing.

It was only later, much later, that I reconsidered my decision. But I'm like all mothers who give in to purchases that ESP hunches are against.

I have stocked up on five-cent bubblegum, which I suspect is made of leftover Elmer's Glue and wallpaper paste, so my kids could savagely trade the enclosed baseball cards.

I have hauled home nutritionless cereals so they could save the box tops.

And I have spent weary hours trudging from store to store in search of that birthday request... "a Bumpa-Long Rocking Horse," touted on TV cartoon shows.

But how could I say no to a bicycle purchase, especially since it was their own money for a change? I figured a bicycle is a healthful toy promoting out-of-doors exercise that could eventually lead to avenues of worthwhile competitive athletics.

I hadn't dreamed that ownership of these bicycles would bring out a hidden demonic side to their personalities. They hot-rodged down our gravel-covered driveway, "laying patches" and spraying pebbles. They skidded to sudden stops, then hurled the front wheel in the air to start off again... an effect known as "popping wheelies."

"Hey, look at me, mom!" Maybe it's good, clean fun, I told myself. But a nagging doubt crept in because these bikes looked like strangely souped-up hotrods instead of muscle-building bicycle transportation.

Overnight a bicycle customizing cult sprang up. Paper route money went for "sissy bars," the tall, chrome, curved bar attached behind the banana seat. And "choppers," an elongated front fork that moves the guidance wheel awkwardly forward. According to my source, the chopper gives the bike "a snapper look."

If mothers paid more attention to their ESP hunches, the world might not have needed Ralph Nader. Now I read that these enormously popular bicycles are grossly dangerous when put into the hands of the children for whom they were intended.

The National Transportation Safety Board reported that parents who buy their children these high-rise handlebar bicycles may be buying an unsafe and possibly lethal toy.

Now I knew that mini-bikes were on the danger list. And I gloated as I read my boys the recent report that mini-bikes are unsafe at any speed. Salesmen who tried them out in deserted parking lots often careened out of control, hitting such far-spaced objects as light poles and random parked cars. We had a blanket veto in our house covering mini-bikes.

But to find out that a self-propelled bicycle, no matter how gaudy, is delivered with a skull-and-crossbones tag shakes any well-intentioned mother.

The study for the National Commission of Product Safety found that the sting-ray, without gearing, "is not a good design for transportation." The fault lies not so much with the cycle itself, but that "it is a bike to have fun with and by incorporating features which make this possible, it requires somewhat more skill for its operation." They reported that the high-riser "outperforms the conventional bike only in acrobatics."

My sons, with their sting-ray bicycles, have joined the rest of our family, which is immersed in a massive mechanical jinx. My 1967 Chevrolet station wagon has been recalled for faulty motor mounts. My husband's foreign car requires a live-in mechanic.

And now a garageful of high-powered bicycles, all painted in baked-on colors of flecked gold and candy-apple red, are lined up ready to attack my mobile sons.

It makes the Bumpa-Long Rocking Horse that was triggered to self-destruct after a week's use look like a pretty good deal.

Lee Trevino is carrying a 6-wood this year, a club usually thought of as being for women or senior golfers. A 6-wood probably would cut strokes off your handicap.

Trevino, like most weekend golfers, has trouble hitting the ball high, especially with long irons. The 2-iron, 3-iron and 4-iron chronically plague the average player.

But fairway woods are easier to swing. Plus you probably hit more fairway woods than practically anything else, and you have no fear of them. A 6-wood can replace the long irons and bring about more high, accurate hits.

It can be very valuable on many par-3 holes. Out of the rough, it is less difficult to use than an iron.

For too long, clubs like the 6-wood have been thought of as sissy clubs. Trevino is giving the lie to that, and I can think of no better example for the weekenders.

With the season not half completed, the Lakers lead already jumped out to a commanding lead in their division.

"Now," asks Commissioner Kennedy, "would anybody like to hear about the case of Julius Erving...?"
